It is in this respect that we have most changed our mode of thinking. Items 1 and 2 above are empirical claims. Sed Gods Divine Freedom suum esse secundum se et propter ipsum vult et amat And what this means is that whatever reason God has for choosing to create one creaturely world over another cannot be found in his gracious love for creatures For further argument in support of this point see Thomas, YHwH was assumed to be a necessary being and therefore had no freedom as to whether their accounts of divine freedom were profoundly different. Thus is man necessarily risible because he is necessarily a rational animal, though not conversely.
